

WILLOW, symptom of life pushing and peeling myself out of my disguise looking at you now i am wondering who am i if i could try to take you back i couldn't define feeling

absence of time knowing
all is decided there's nothing
here left to find the story's all in my mind pushing and peeling the layers that cover my mind
looking into the shadow now i notice the light magic is real
when you see it inside
you decide
it's like a snake shedding skin creating life to begin and all you know has vanished again transcending virtue and sin
feast my eyes on lower things while beauty is a symptom of life gotta decide if i'm gonna see it
why
feast our eyes on lower things when suffering is craving the light gotta decide how we're gonna heal it
why
feast my eyes on lower things
while beauty is a symptom of life
gotta decide if i'm gonna see it
why
feast our eyes on lower things
when suffering is craving the light
gotta decide how we're gonna heal it
why
yeah
gotta decide how we're gonna feel it i am trying to find out
gotta know
that life is fragile
gotta know
but
gotta go
i stood in awe
inside a temple
of a god i didn't know
wanna go
find the one who understands
why we wait for pain to change us to let me know
that life is fragile
it's like a turtle in sand making
way to the ocean
almost
meeting the end
because the birds are in motion
feast my eyes on lower things
while beauty is a symptom of life

gotta decide if i'm gonna see it
why
feast our eyes on lower things
when suffering is craving the light
gotta decide how we're gonna heal it
why
feast my eyes on lower things
while beauty is a symptom of life
gotta decide if i'm gonna see it
why
feast our eyes on lower things when suffering is craving the light gotta decide how we're gonna heal it
why
yeah
gotta decide how we're gonna feel it
i am trying to find out