Bad Religion, Prove It

Hit the road in wander mode Inquire along the way Savoir faire in full despair While living day to day My heart is not A cold cauldron of proof I don't ever need to prove myself to you, no Looking back I off the tracks More times than I recognize Mistakes are another Opportunity to refine My heart is not A cold cauldron of proof I don't ever need To prove myself to you There no such thing as hell But you can make it if you try There might come a day When emotion can be quantified But as of now there No proof necessary No proof necessary No proof necessary There's no proof necessary It's only in your mind Mind, mind, your mind